

Education and Years of Experience

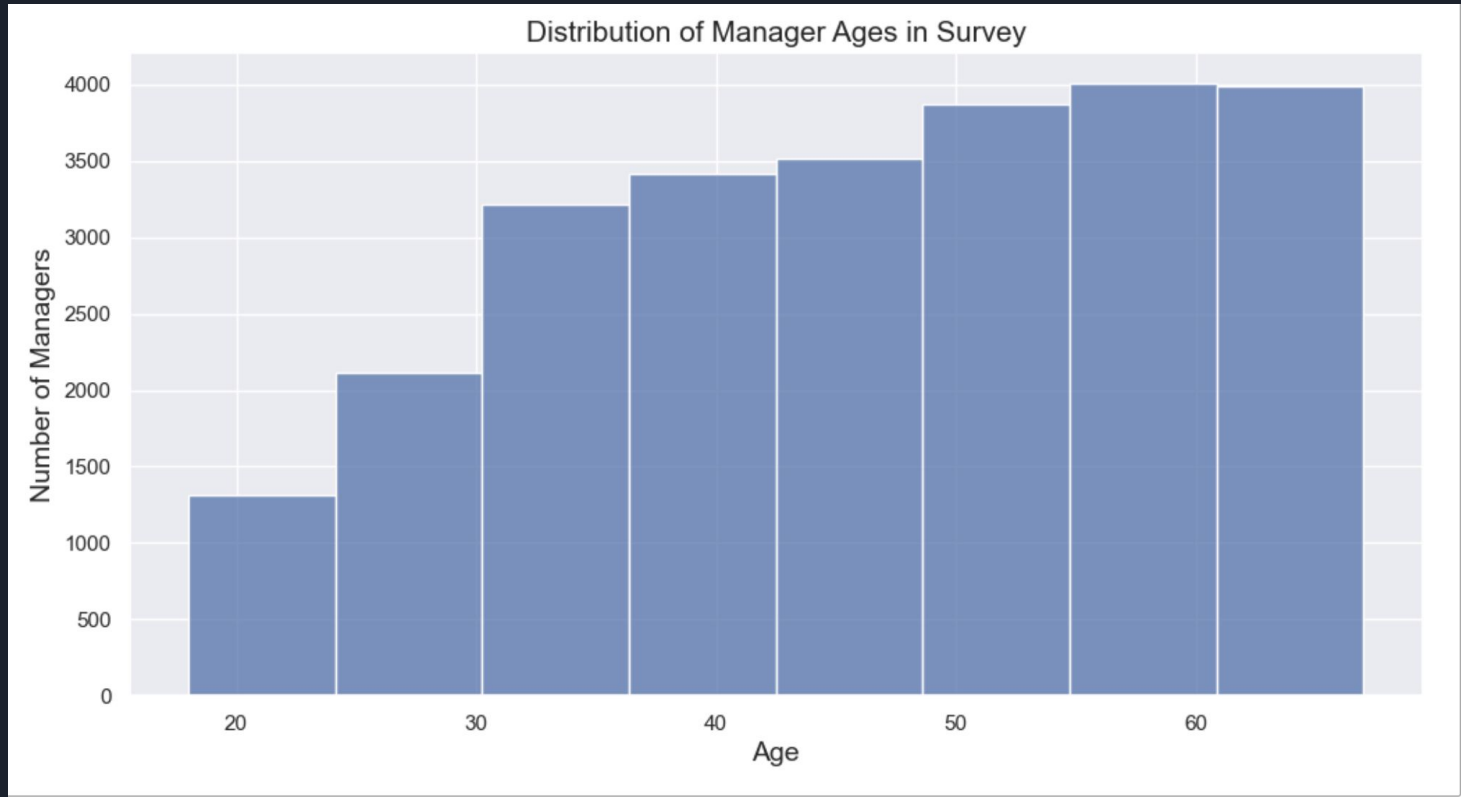

By: Siham Ahmed

How does education/experience affect a manager's salary.

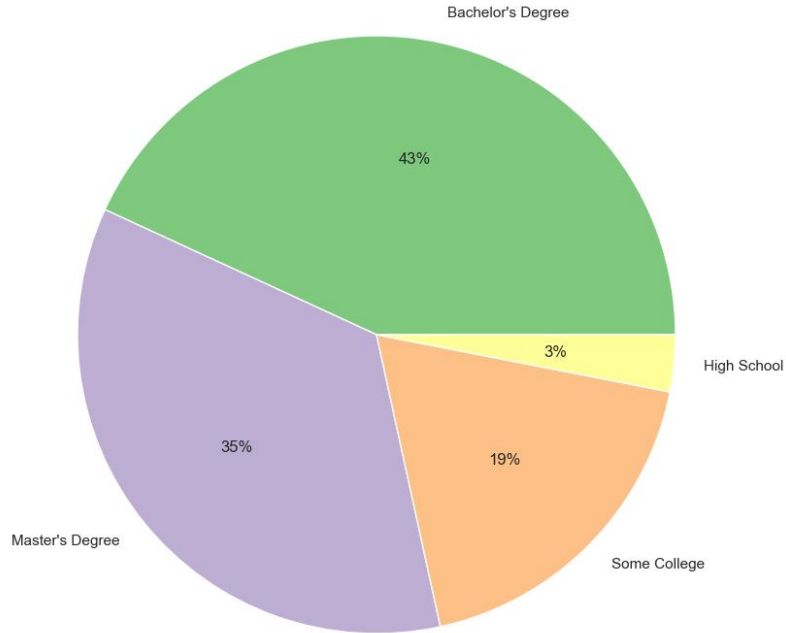

Different factors that affect a manager's salary:

- Education Level
- Age
- Years of experience

There is a positive correlation between age and number of managers. As age increases, so does the number of managers. When age is 65 the amount of managers stays steady

Manager's Education Levels

78% of managers hold at least a Bachelor's degree, and of them 35% holds a Master's degree as well.

Data show there is a correlation between education and salary. The more education someone has, the higher your salary would be.
